STUDENTS' RESPONSIBILITIES

It is the responsibility of all students registering in the Faculty of Arts:

1. to become familiar with the specific requirements for their degree and with the academic regulations;
2. to ensure that the courses chosen meet all the programme requirements and the requirements for graduation;
3. to ensure that they have completed the prerequisite(s) for courses chosen;
4. to ensure that there are no scheduling conflicts for the courses they have chosen;
5. to meet all the deadlines indicated in the University Calendar

(http://web1.uottawa.ca/uopr/regist/dates_future_en.asp).

SCHEDULING REQUIREMENTS

The new honours programme is primarily designed for those wishing to proceed to an MA in some area of classics. Therefore it assumes that students will be taking at least a few Latin or Greek courses at the 4000 level. These students' requirements are addressed in the first section below. Those who do not wish to pursue the languages beyond the basic requirements and do not want to continue to an MA in classics are addressed in section two.

NOTES ON COURSES

TOPICS COURSES

There is no formal prerequisite for history or literature courses at the 3000-level, but students are strongly encouraged to take the relevant 2000-level courses before attempting the 3000-level courses, unless they already have the appropriate background. These courses are differentiated by subtitles that change from year to year; you may repeat the course for credit as often as you wish, provided it has a different subtitle each time.

CLA3110 Topics in ancient history

CLA3130 Topics in Greek and Latin Literature

Note that you should take at least one 3000-level course in your second year and one CLA4150 in your third and your fourth year. Keep in mind the requirements for 3000 and 4000 courses in your programme (see tables below).

The CLA and LCL 3000 and 4000 topics courses are listed on the website of the department.

CROSS-LISTED COURSES

The following courses are also offered as CLA by other departments or programmes:

- CLT2140/CLA2140 The Celtic Iron Age
- HIS2335/CLA2335 Western Europe from the 5th to the 15th Century
- PHI2122/CLA2122 Greek Wisdom
- PHI2380/CLA2380 Greek Philosophy or the Birth of Philosophy
- PHI3370/CLA3370 Plato : The Philosopher as Legislator
- PHI3380/CLA3380 Aristotle or the Search for Happiness
- SRS2382/CLA2382 Bible and Culture II : Texts and Traditions of Early Christianity
- SRS2383/CLA2383 Jews and Christians in Late Antiquity
- SRS3163/CLA3163 Women in Early Christianity
- THE2145/CLA2145 Theatre History I : From Ritual to Profession

ARCHAEOLOGICAL EXCAVATIONS

The courses CLA3000 and CLA3900 involve participation in an archaeological excavation or field survey. There are two ways of becoming involved in such excavations or surveys. The first is to consult Prof. Dijkstra, who has contacts with various European led projects. Second, you can enroll in a 'field school' course at another university. We receive a large compendium listing each year's archaeological excavations and it can be borrowed from the department office. The web is often an easy way to find other Canadian and foreign universities that offer such courses (American and British are the easiest to deal with for the transfer of records). You can also check the classics department's web pages of links to other universities.

The maximum number of credits available from archaeological excavations is twelve and students will only be allowed to count two excavations for credit. Possible combinations are, therefore, CLA3900 + 3900 (= 6 cr.), CLA3000 + 3900 or 3900 + 3000 (=9 cr.), and CLA 3000 + 3000 (=12 cr.). Students cannot enroll in both CLA3000 and CLA3900 during the same summer. Please see the director of undergraduate studies for further details.

Permission to obtain credit will be granted by the director of undergraduate studies on a case-by-case basis. It will not be granted unless the dig meets the following criteria: (1) it has been approved by Prof. Dijkstra or it is run as a 'field school' course through another university (this is fundamental); (2) it must last a minimum of two weeks (CLA3900) or four weeks (CLA3000), with a minimum of five working days per week; (3) it must involve a classical site (though in special circumstances Bronze or Iron Age Mediterranean sites may be accepted); (4) it must offer suitable training; and (5) you must not be paid during the excavation for which credit is to be granted. Application forms for the approval of summer digs can be obtained from the academic assistant or secretary. These must be filled out, then submitted to and approved by the director of undergraduate studies before you will be allowed to register for any of these courses. It is best to discuss any plans you may have for going on a summer dig with the director as early in the school year as possible. For the summer, the deadline for approval is the last week of March/first week of April so that all paperwork can be completed during the normal pre-registration period.

For those registering in a course at another university

After approval has been granted by the director of undergraduate studies a 'Letter of Permission' must be filled out and submitted (with appropriate payment). This will allow the marks from the host university to be automatically transferred here upon completion of the course. The director of undergraduate studies decides if the course is equivalent to either CLA3000 or CLA3900 on the basis of the work load and the requirements. The form can be obtained from the academic assistant or from Info Services in Tabaret. It is up to the individual student to find a suitable excavation, to complete the 'Letter of Permission', to register for the course at the host university, and to pay all associated fees and costs.

Remember that archaeological digs make substantial demands on a person, both physically and emotionally. Being in good health and physically fit is an absolute necessity.

DIRECTED STUDIES COURSES

The most important point to note about directed studies courses is that they are for students who need them, not for those who want them.

A directed studies course may take the form either of directed studies in a particular topic (meeting three hours a week) or of an in-depth research paper. Those taking LCL4140 or 4190 are required to sit a translation exam.

All applications for directed studies must be approved by the chairman of the sector, the director of undergraduate studies, and by the professor who undertakes to supervise the student. The rejection of an application by any of these three will be considered final; there is no appeal (though in the case of rejection by the supervising professor, the student can attempt to find a different professor).

Students wishing to take directed studies should first ensure that they are enrolled in all the required courses, then find a professor willing to supervise them. They should then submit to the director of undergraduate studies a detailed proposal, including a course outline, mark breakdown, methods of evaluation, and a letter of agreement from the potential supervisor (or the supervisor may bring this document to the director her/himself).

Since directed studies courses drain students away from other regularly scheduled classes they will only be allowed in cases where students who have taken and are taking all available courses require extra courses for such things as admission to graduate school.

Applications from students who do not take regular courses simply because they do not like them or the professors will not be considered. Leaving critical decisions and courses until the fourth year and then finding that it is too late will not be considered a valid cause for a directed studies course.

SCHOLARSHIPS

The University of Ottawa offers many scholarships to students at the B.A. level. A "Directory of Undergraduate Awards" is available at Financial Aids Services, located in the University Centre.

The Classics sector offers two departmental scholarships:

Margaret and Michel Roussel Scholarship (minimum $500): Aims to encourage academic excellence and bilingualism. Awarded to a full-time student who is entering his or her fourth year of studies and meets certain requirements of excellence in courses taught in French as well as in courses taught in English.

Trevor C. Jones Memorial Award ($1,000): Awarded to a graduating student in the major or honours BA with specialization in classics programme.

Lazarus Rosenberg Bursary in Classics (amount can vary). Awarded to a 4th year student in the BA with specialization in Classics.

There are also national competitions in which you are encouraged to participate
Classical Association of Canada Undergraduate essay competition (3 prizes of 150, 100 and 50$)

Classical Association of Canada Greek and Latin sight translation competition (2 X 3 prizes 150, 100 and 50$)
