JONATHAN DOREY

Archival Interaction and Canadian university archives websites

Jonathan's doctoral study aims to draw an exhaustive portrait of the usefulness of university archives websites in Canada. The methodology reproduces similar studies done in the United States to better understand the Canadian context. This exploratory study comprises two phases: an analysis of 81 Canadian university archives websites and an online survey of history undergraduate students. Both quantitative and qualitative data were collected to assess the effectiveness and efficiency of the content placed on these websites and to evaluate the perceived usefulness of survey respondents towards these elements. The study is based on the Archival Reference Knowledge Framework (ARK), proposed by Duff, Yakel, and Tibbo (2013). Jonathan Dorey est candidat au doctorat en sciences de l'information à l'Université McGill et professeur à temps partiel à l'Université d'Ottawa, où il enseigne le cours de Métadonnées et taxonomies. Jonathan a travaillé comme traducteur, archiviste, bibliothécaire et spécialiste de la taxonomie.
