THE DEVIL'S DECADE: A GLOBAL HISTORY OF THE 1930S IN NOVEL, POEM AND FILM
The Great Depression represented an existential crisis for liberal democracy, laissez-faire capitalism and the Versailles international system. Cockburn's colorful notion of the 'Devil's Decade' highlights the zeitgeist of the 1930s; how economic malaise and political dysfunction combined to spur various forms of ideological radicalism and political extremism from fascism to murderous Stalinism and Japanese militarism. Novels, poems and film provide a lens for exploring how ordinary people coped with the 1930s many calamities: the Dust Bowl, Holodomor, Nanking Massacre, Spanish Civil War and Kristallnacht. The course will also explore some of the parallels between the 1930s and contemporary political radicalism.

Nous étudierons comment et pourquoi ces empires se sont développés, et comment ils ont affecté la vie des peuples qui sont devenus des sujets coloniaux. Les thèmes explorés seront parmi les suivants : le rôle des sciences sociales et naturelles au sein du projet impérial, le coût politique, social et économique de l'expansion coloniale, la création des cultures coloniales, les processus de décolonisation et l'héritage colonial.

HIS 4397A	Seminar in European History	(3,0,0) 3 cr.
EUROPEAN COLONIAL CULTURE, 19-20TH CENTURIES
This seminar explores how colonial projects shaped modern European culture writ large in the 19th and 20th centuries. We will rely on a wide range of secondary literature that draws not only on historiographical debates but also on ethnography, literary theory, and art history as we explore visual, aural, material, and written sources (including novels, furniture, scientific treatises, advertisements, films, food, songs, architectural plans). Among the themes we will explore include the production of knowledge; the construction of gendered and racialized identities; the representations of Europe’s “Others;” and the porousness of the boundaries separating “European” culture from “colonial” cultures.

WATERFALLS, WIRES, AND WIFI: ELECTRICITY, COMMUNICATION, AND THE FORMATION OF MODERN CANADA
The expansive geography of Canada has always presented a challenge to those seeking to make the country more cohesive for economic, political, and social purposes. In the late 19th Century, Sir John A. Macdonald's plan was to move people and goods across the young country by rail, a plan that was eventually realized by building the Canadian Pacific Railway. However, national development through transportation and industry also created other challenges. How were those challenges faced and under whose leadership? This seminar will explore how the process of electrification across Canada enabled the mechanization and automation of industry and the development of communication networks that have evolved and sustained Canada's economic and social development for 150 years.
