AHL 1100 A00	Introduction to Interdisciplinary Study in the Arts	(3,0,0) 3 cr.
Exploration of at least two disciplines in the Faculty of Arts whose conjunction illuminates contemporary situations and debates. Development of critical reading and academic writing.  *This course has variable topics. Students may take this course twice. HUMAN WRONG, HUMAN RIGHTS: SLAVERY, COLONIALISM AND GENOCIDE IN HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE Description for Fall 2017 : This course will teach students to think historically about the ways in which human beings have, in the past as well as in the present, grappled with three significant human problems (slavery, colonialism, and genocide) over a long span of time and across a broad geographical range. In three parts of four weeks each students will learn how historians approach these important questions through key concepts of historical thinking (including historical significance), primary source evidence, continuity and change, cause and consequence, historical perspective, and ethics in history.

HIS 3116 A00	Russian Social and Institutional History prior to Peter The Great	(3,0,0) 3 cr.
Impact of the Mongol invasions on Russian society and institutions; role of the Orthodox Church; rise of autocracy and extension of serfdom. *The history of medieval and early modern Russia – the period from the 9th through the 17th centuries – has long been understood through simplistic myths that have colored not only how we understand Russia today, but how historians have read and interpreted historical evidence. Stories about Mongol invasions that allegedly cut Russia off from Europe, or about Ivan the Terrible's alleged propensity for torturing puppies and kittens, or Russians' alleged love of authoritarian leaders, are regularly cited to explain everything from serfdom to Stalin. This course will address these and other myths by returning to the historical evidence. The goal of the course will be to closely examine a broad range of primary sources (images, graffiti, law codes, chronicles, archeological evidence, etc.) in order to better understand not only the history of "Russia" (in fact called Kiev Rus and Muscovy in these periods), but also the role of narratives and myths in framing the reading of evidence. In short, how we can know what we think we know? Prerequisite: 12 HIS credits including 6 credits at the 2000-level. (E).

AMERICAN MODERNS AND POSTMODERNS: AMERICAN THOUGHT AND CULTURE SINCE 1865
The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened
This course will introduce you to some of the major trends in American thought and culture during the post-Civil War period. In addition to exploring the works of canonical American thinkers and artists, we will focus on close readings of an array of cultural and intellectual expression from diverse primary sources, including photography, film, television, advertisements, music, and social science sources. We will wed these to broader historical contexts, including social relations and political history, and explore why it is that certain beliefs, forms of cultural expression, and representation took hold at particular moments in American history. Some of our central movements and themes include social realism; Darwinism; pragmatism; progressivism; early expressions of American modernity, especially the development of American film and modern art; American liberalism and responses to ideologies, especially communism and fascism; trauma cultures; authenticity and existentialism; American radicalism and conservatism; consumer culture; and postmodernism and its offshoots. We will situate all of these within world trends, showing how American thought and culture both shaped and was shaped by broader global ideas and the arts. From a methodological standpoint, this course aims to explore and create a cultural history that pays equal attention to ideas as it does to the arts, and an intellectual history that pays equal attention to the arts as it does to ideas.

4000 Seminars and Courses // Cours et séminaires 4000s

These courses are reserved for students in history (majors, honours specialisation, and joint honours). We do not have enough resources to accommodate all students who would wish to take these courses. You are therefore limited to the number required to graduate, unless you receive special permission from the department (see registration FAQ on the department website for more information).

If you register without permission for more 4000 courses or seminars than you need, we unfortunately will have no choice but to remove you from the extra seminar (otherwise some students will not be able to graduate.)

Ces cours sont réservés aux étudiants en histoire (majeur, spécialisation approfondie, programmes bidisciplinaires). Nous n'avons, malheureusement, pas les ressources pour permettre l'inscription de tous ceux qui voudraient suivre ces cours. Vous êtes donc restreint à vous inscrire au nombre de cours/séminaires 4000 dont vous avez besoin pour satisfaire les exigences de votre programme, à moins de recevoir une permission spéciale du département. (Voir la « foire aux questions » sur le site Web du département d'histoire pour plus de détails).

CANADA'S RIGHTS REVOLUTION

\*The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened*

Contemporary Canadians take their Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, entrenched in the Constitution Act, 1982, for granted. This seminar will analyze the origins, the framing, the entrenchment, and the implementation of Canada's world-renowned Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The Canadian Charter is now a central element, alongside democracy, the rule of law, minority rights and federalism, to Canada's Constitution. What role did British-Canadian political & civil liberties organizations and the United Nation's Charter of Rights instruments play in the development of Canada's Rights and Freedoms? Who were the array of proponents and critics of an entrenched Charter of Rights? What was the nature and scope of their arguments and how and why did the Charter's advocates win the day? What role have the Charter Canadian organizations and the Supreme Court of Canada played in the implementation of the Charter?

EUROPEAN EMPIRES & INDIGENOUS DISPOSSESSION

\*The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened*

This seminar course focuses on the survival of Indigenous peoples in the context of the global expansion of European empires in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Course readings focus on the tools of geographic and demographic expansion that were central to European empires, and which were devastating to Indigenous peoples in North America and around the world. In particular, readings and discussion will explore the myriad ways in which European settlers and colonial governments worked to take Indigenous lands. Along with works that are strictly historical, the course also includes theoretical works from other disciplines including anthropology, geography, Indigenous studies, and political science. Students will take an active part in leading discussions and will write an article-length research paper using primary sources

BLACK LIVES MATTER  The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened This course explores the origins and antecedents of the Black Lives Matter movement in the United States. We will ask what—if anything—this movement has in common with abolitionism, civil rights, and Black Power before it, given its interest in intersectionality (especially the relationship between race and sexuality), and its animation by American crime policies in the 1990s. In turn, we will explore the emergence of Black Lives Matter movements in other countries, and their antecedents, and compare these to parallel social movements. We will read an array of historiography, critical race theory, sexuality studies, legal studies, as well as political and cultural theory. Central themes will include violence, racialized bodies, the politicization of crime and incarceration, internal colonialism, deindustrialization, as well as ideas about racial and sexual “minorities”.

HISTORIES OF ABORIGINAL CLAIMS AND PROTESTS IN CANADA  The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened This course examines a selection of recent Aboriginal claims and protests in Canada, and the unique historical background for each of these instances of conflict or negotiation. For every selected modern event – such as the Oka Crisis (1990), Caledonia (2006), Idle No More (2012) and current Algonquin land claim negotiations – the seminar will examine the history of the issues involved. For example, for the Oka Crisis we will discuss the Indigenous and colonial history at Lake of Two Mountains; and for the Caledonia dispute we will examine the Six Nations history and land rights on the Grand River in southern Ontario. The class will encourage students to understand the details and complexity of a variety of long-standing Aboriginal claims in Canada, while also considering the ways in which these have been addressed by Indigenous and Crown parties since the late twentieth century.

Among the topics explored are dissent and protest, popular cultural consumption, production and distribution of cultural texts, and racial and sexual identity construction and expression. This course is not dedicated to the history of rock &amp; roll per se, but rather how popular music has emerged as a ubiquitous means of expression in the second half of the twentieth century, and one that can be used to understand the historical circumstances from which it was created, distributed, and consumed.

Inter-American cultural manifestations are many and diverse but always interwoven with political intentions and consequences. This approach reveals how cultural mediators shaped the historical encounters between Latin Americans and North Americans. The power relations attending such mediations are asymmetrical, but communication typically flowed both ways, creating diverse transnational arrangements and forms of power. Particular attention will be given to a materially grounded, processual analysis of U.S. interaction with Latin American politics, societies and cultures. With that objective we will study cultural practices and institutions such as folklore, mass media, leisure pastimes, and spectacle as well as the broader cultural realm of aspirations, beliefs, values, attitudes, tastes, and habits that shape these histories.

This seminar examines landmark trials about British imperial expansion as legal events but also as opportunities to reflect upon such themes as the domestic and colonial, upon power and authority, upon commerce and constitutionalism, and upon rule and misrule and negotiation and resistance. English cases dealing with experiences in the Americas, the Caribbean and the East Indies will be considered within their legal and historical contexts as they influenced and instantiated British and colonial legal cultures in the age of revolutions. POSTWAR EUROPE AND ITS BORDERS: A HISTORY OF MIGRATION AND INTEGRATION

\*The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened*

One cannot understand contemporary Europe without taking its history of migration into account. Considered by many to have become the epicentre of global migration flows, this process has been - and is still today - fraught with tensions. The immediate postwar political and economic landscape greatly impacted the way migration to Europe developed, from labour recruitment programs and postcolonial migration to increased numbers of refugees and the harmonization of EU asylum policies. As such, this seminar aims to highlight the ideas, institutions, and actors that have influenced the evolution of migration in postwar Europe. The objective is to provide the student with the necessary theoretical and analytical tools to be able to grasp how migration has affected both Europe itself and those entering its borders.

LA FRANCOPHONIE CANADIENNE ET SES « RÉVOLUTIONS TRANQUILLES »
(1960 À AUJOURD'HUI)

\*Le sous-titre dans ce Campus a été abrégé*

Depuis les années 1960, les différentes composantes de la francophonie canadienne (Ontario français, Acadie, communautés francophones de l'Ouest) ont vécu, comme le Québec, leurs propres « révolutions tranquilles ». D'une part, elles ont connu, pendant cette période, de profonds bouleversements attribuables, notamment, à la transformation de leurs structures sociales, de leurs valeurs et de leur mode de vie. D'autre part, les luttes sociales, culturelles et politiques qu'elles ont vécues les ont conduites à remettre en question l'idéologie canadienne-française et acadienne traditionnelle, sans toutefois l'écartier complètement de leur univers intellectuel.

Dans le cadre de ce séminaire, nous tenterons de comprendre la manière dont la francophonie canadienne a cherché, dans un tel contexte, à se « refonder », à se donner de nouvelles assises identitaires, politiques et institutionnelles. S'il est vrai que les anciens référents identitaires (canadiens-français ou acadiens) ont été marginalisés, par quel(s) projet(s) a-t-on voulu les remplacer ? Quelle place le souvenir du Canada français et de l'Acadie historique occupe-t-il, à l'heure actuelle, dans la construction identitaire des communautés francophones ? Ces dernières se considèrent-elles comme des entités autonomes, capables d'« écrire leur propre histoire » et de choisir leur propre avenir, ou comme des sous-groupes du plus vaste ensemble canadien ?

Tout au long de ce cours, nous tâcherons d'étudier les communautés francophones par le biais de ce qu'elles ont en partage (leurs éléments de convergence), mais aussi par le biais de ce qui les distingue les unes des autres (leurs éléments de divergence). Parmi les thèmes que nous aborderons, notons les suivants : revendications politiques et sociales; diversification ethnoculturelle des communautés francophones; transformation de leur rapport au Québec, au catholicisme et à la majorité anglophone; assimilation et acculturation; montée des idéologies de gauche (décolonisation et tiers-mondisme, néonationalisme, contre-culture, démocratie participative, etc.). Le programme de lecture sera composé à la fois d'études universitaires et de textes produits par quelques-uns des principaux acteurs politiques, culturels et intellectuels de la francophonie canadienne depuis les années 1960

Ce cours invite ainsi les étudiants à s'interroger sur la représentation numérique de l'histoire. Quelles approches et perspectives historiques s'y retrouvent? Quels sont leur potentiel et leurs limites comme vecteurs de connaissance historique ? Les jeux qui mettent en vedette l'histoire canadienne – tant l'exploration et la colonisation européenne du territoire, que la rencontre des peuples autochtones et les grands conflits mondiaux – nous fourniront la matière à réflexion et à discussion.

THE MODERN WORLD WAS BORN IN A VIOLENT NINETEENTH CENTURY COLLISION.  The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened Europe's early industrialization combined with parallel revolutions in global transportation and communication, created a global disequilibrium that resulted in an imperial wave crashing over the non-western world from 1815-1908. Ecological imperialism was a key dimension of the Western 'civilizing mission.' Throughout the non-Western World, Western Empires sought to improve 'backward' indigenous practices by introducing exotic crops, infrastructure and coercive colonial laws that tie local production to the capitalist world market and recontoured local agro-ecosystems from subsistence agriculture towards surplus commodity production. This course surveys the unapologetic Western quest to incorporate distant lands into the European dominated world system from 1870-1914 and the ideological frameworks, technologies and institutions that conditioned the transformation of fragile ecosystems. New Imperialism is examined in global perspective, highlighting the uneven impact upon various world regions and peoples, while select case studies highlight particular extractive industries and ecological themes. Matriculating students acquire an insight into the birth of the global economy, the ecological footprint of empires and how they are linked to contemporary environmental challenges.  Prerequisite: 12 HIS credits including 6 credits at the 2000-level.

CONTOURS OF A PEOPLE: FUR TRADE AND METIS COMMUNITIES IN NORTH AMERICA'S PAYS D'EN HAUT 1760-1850 The subtitle in noCampus has been shortened From the 18th century onward, communities emerged in the so-called 'upper country' where a fur trade economy dominated social and economic relations till the latter half of the 19th century. In some cases, these communities were part of a French River World: a vast network of settlements and trading post linked together by business, kinship, linguistic and religious ties. This world emerged from the Montreal-based peltry trade and followed the old voyageur routes into the Great Lakes to settlements such as Detroit, Michilimackinac and Green Bay and continued southwards to the Mississippi valley and St Louis to finally end at the old seaport of New Orleans. Other fur trade communities emerged and took on an identity somewhat distinct from the French River World. The most renowned examples of these are the bison-hunting Metis of the interior Great Plains. Though still linked to a fur trade network, Plains Metis communities took on distinct contours. This course will examine the various societies that emerged out of the fur trade to try and better understand their underpinnings and characteristics. Prerequisite: 12 HIS credits including 6 credits at the 2000-level.

4000 Seminars and Courses // Cours et séminaires 4000s

These courses are reserved for students in history (majors, honours specialisation, and joint honours). We do not have enough resources to accommodate all students who would wish to take these courses. You are therefore limited to the number required to graduate, unless you receive special permission from the department (see registration FAQ on the department website for more information).

If you register without permission for more 4000 courses or seminars than you need, we unfortunately will have no choice but to remove you from the extra seminar (otherwise some students will not be able to graduate.)

Ces cours sont réservés aux étudiants en histoire (majeur, spécialisation approfondie, programmes bidisciplinaires). Nous n'avons, malheureusement, pas les ressources pour permettre l'inscription de tous ceux qui voudraient suivre ces cours. Vous êtes donc restreint à vous inscrire au nombre de cours/séminaires 4000 dont vous avez besoin pour satisfaire les exigences de votre programme, à moins de recevoir une permission spéciale du département. (Voir la « foire aux questions » sur le site Web du département d'histoire pour plus de détails).

CANADA'S POOR: PROTEST AND POLICY  The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened The agency, activism and political views of Canada's 'dispossessed' can no longer be ignored. Since the late eighteenth-century, the poor have indicted economic inequality and confronted the creation, growth and modifications of an inadequate Canadian welfare state through their protest and mobilization. As a 'history from below,' this course centres poor people's movements as a dominant driver of state responses to poverty and unemployment from the 1790s to the present day. Attention will be paid to the ways anti-poverty activists have replicated and/or challenged the dominant views of class, race and gender that have historically circumscribed welfare policy. Engaging with theories of social movements and political economy and drawing upon primary and secondary source material, students will unearth the 'hidden transcripts' and resistance of some of Canada's most marginalized. Prerequisite: 81 university credits. THE MAKING OF THE DIGITAL AGE IN CANADA AND BEYOND  The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened In recent decades, digital technologies have increasingly enabled, accelerated and then influenced new thinking and behaviour across societies around the world. Canada has played a key role including the pioneering work of Harold Innis and Marshal McLuhan. In addition, scholars have helped develop new fields such as “History and Computing,” “Information Science” (including developments in libraries, museums and archives), and the “Digital Humanities.” In order to study such developments, this course will include the learning of diverse digital tools used in historical research (as well as in businesses, governments and communities). Throughout the course, students will assess the strengths and weaknesses of such tools as illustrated by their own individual or collaborative research projects (and those of other students) on the making of the making of the Digital Age Prerequisite: 81 university credits. Reserved for students registered in the Honours, Joint Honours or Major in History. (C).

CONTEMPORARY JEWISH HISTORY IN A COMPARATIVE PERSPECTIVE  The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened Using the example of France, Germany, Russia and Israel, this course will examine the historical evolution of contemporary Jewish minorities living under very different political and cultural regimes in Europe and the Middle East. Special attention will be paid to the emancipation of Jews in the Western world, to the contribution of Jewish minorities to their host society and to the objections raised against them by anti-Semitic ideologies. Part of the course will deal with the history of Zionism and the State of Israel, and with the reaction of the Jewish populations of Europe to this new approach in resolving the long standing complexities of Jewish emancipation. Prerequisite: 81 university credits. RUSSIA'S REVOLUTIONS 1890s-1930s  The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened The extraordinary Bolshevik experiment that began with the October 1917 Revolution—one of the most important events of the 20th century—aimed at completely recasting the culture, economy, and politics of the Russian Empire. This seminar seeks to understand the sources and consequences of some of the numerous revolutionary transformations that it wrought. This task cannot be reduced to events and to the communist government’s ideological blueprints. “Revolution” meant different things to different people: the dream of building a more just society unleashed numerous ideas of what the future should be like, with competing visions of fairness, of nation and ethnicity, of the new city, the new family, the new art, the new economy, etc. The revolutionary experiment was also born in a society and an international context that constrained and shaped the emerging system, and can only be understood as rooted in political practices and ideas that had emerged in the late 19th century and in the violence of World War I.

BORDERS, MOBILITY, CULTURE, AND IDENTITY IN AN INTEGRATING EUROPE  The subtitle in uoCampus has been shortened The history of European integration is about borders—physical borders and “borders of the mind”. It is about eliminating national frontier borders, extending and protecting Europe’s outer frontiers, and rethinking/remaking borders of language, culture, and community. Integration is about constructing a European space, fostering mobility within that space, and creating a European identity for this new territory and its emerging system of governance. This seminar will focus on a range of issues associated with borders, mobility, and identity in the European Union, including immigration, transnational lifestyles, popular culture, ‘unwanted’ mobility, the culture of transborder regions, reflections on Europe’s “Other(s)” and their role in shaping European identity, nationalism, racism, citizenship, religion, and other systems of inclusion and exclusion that have shaped Europe and its physical and symbolic borders.

HISTOIRE INTELLECTUELLE DU QUÉBEC ET DU CANADA FRANÇAIS
Le sous-titre dans uoCampus a été abrégé
Ce séminaire se penche sur la vie intellectuelle québécoise et canadienne-française de la Conquête britannique à la Révolution tranquille. Il invite les étudiants à approfondir divers thèmes dont l'évolution du nationalisme, le rôle de l'Église catholique dans la vie intellectuelle, l'émergence des intellectuels, les revendications féministes et la vie intellectuelle des groupes minoritaires. Le séminaire se composera de rencontres hebdomadaires au cours desquelles les étudiants seront appelés à analyser et à discuter les textes au programme. Les étudiants devront également rédiger un compte rendu et un travail de recherche et ils devront présenter leur projet de recherche au séminaire.

Dans ce séminaire nous analysons le processus de développement du nouvel État-nation américain (politique, économique, social, culturel) à l'époque de la Révolution et au début de la période nationale. Nous commençons avec l'impact de la culture des Lumières sur l'invention d'un nouvel état-nation moderne. Nous examinons la nature de la révolution américaine et des nouvelles institutions politiques, la place des femmes, de l'esclavage et de la religion dans la société, la nouvelle économie post-mercantiliste, le rôle de l'éducation et des lettres, ainsi que le développement des discours de nationalisme, d'exceptionnalisme, et d'universalisme américains. Nous terminons avec le regard d'observateurs étrangers sur la nature de cette expérience inédite et complexe. Le séminaire comprend des discussions à base de lectures intensives de documents primaires et secondaires en français et en anglais, des présentations orales, et une dissertation.

L'APPROCHE MICROHISTORIQUE, LES AUTOCHTONES ET LA CORRESPONDANCE RELIGIEUSE DE L'OUEST CANADIEN (1818 - 1885) Le sous-titre dans ce Campus a été abrégé Ne vous fiez jamais aux impressions générales, mon garçon, mais consacrez toute votre attention aux détails. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, « UN CAS D'IDENTITÉ » Vous connaissez ma méthode. Elle est fondée sur l'observation la plus minutieuse. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, LE MYSTÈRE DE LA VALLÉE DE BOSCOMBE La microhistoire ou le « paradigme de l'indice » procède à une réduction d'échelle et s'intéresse à des individus non considérés comme représentatifs d'une catégorie sociale. Ce faisant, elle n'écarte pas pour autant l'histoire globale et l'étude individuelle n'est pas contradictoire de l'étude sociale. La microhistoire envisage l'aspect social comme un ensemble d'interrelations mobiles. Elle se donne donc pour but l'étude des objets de taille limitée, dont l'interprétation permet l'accès à des aspects ignorés par l'histoire quantitative. Ce séminaire est axé sur l'élaboration et la mise en œuvre d'un projet de recherche basé sur les écrits des missionnaires Oblats de Marie Immaculée qui ont fait de l'apostolat parmi les populations de Premières Nations et Métis de l'Ouest canadien entre 1818 et 1885. N.B. Une connaissance de l'anglais écrit est fortement recommandée pour ce séminaire.

LOI ET SOCIÉTÉ SOUS L'EMPIRE ESPAGNOL Le sous-titre dans uoCampus a été abrégé Ce cours présentera l'histoire légale de l'Empire espagnol, depuis les Siete Partidas du roi Alphonse X au 13e siècle, en pleine Reconquête de la péninsule ibérique, jusqu'à l'adoption de la Constitution de Cadix au début du 19e siècle. À l'aide de sources primaires et d'études en histoire sociale, nous verrons comment l'évolution de la loi a affecté les sociétés de l'empire en Amérique latine, en Afrique et en Asie. Nous étudierons, par exemple, le lien entre la loi et l'émergence du concept de race, la transmission de la normativité européenne aux peuples autochtones, ainsi que l'impact de la modernité sur la loi, la politique et la société à la veille de la désintégration de l'empire.
